Civil service reform is being left to shift for itself under this administration. It never had a friend in the democratic party, and is now going a-begging.

If no European country will receive Kiley, suppose the government sends him to the Canal Islands? It would be a good thing for the government but rough on the Canals.

John McCallough has at last been placed in the Bloomington insane asylum. It required some sharp practice to get him to the hospital, but when once there, John thought the "total" a nice one and seemed to be well pleased with his quarters. The poor man's reason is almost completely deranged, and it is a question if he ever recovers.

S. W. Tallmadge, of Milwaukee, furnishes the following which is his second estimate of this year's wheat yield of the United States: Spring wheat, 121,000,000 bushels; winter wheat, 210,000,000 bushels. Total spring and winter, 331,000,000 bushels. From these figures it will be seen that the crop of 1885, compared with 1884, will show a shortage in winter wheat of 160,000,000 bushels; spring wheat, 22,000,000 bushels. Total shortage, spring and winter, 182,000,000 bushels. The average wheat yield of the United States for five years past is 461,000,000 bushels.

Three years ago a bachelor German immigrant went to Dakota, entered some land, and since then has put it under a good state of cultivation. Then he advertised in the New York Tribune for a wife, and desired that she be selected from the crowd of immigrants at Castle Garden. Within a week he received four hundred letters from all sorts of feminine creatures. In two weeks he was married, and now advertises in the Tribune that he has a wife and wants no more letters. It is singular fact that while he advertised for a German woman, many others offered themselves, and asked the privilege of paying their own expenses to visit him, so anxious were they that he might see them.

Robertson, who ought to have been kicked out of the New York custom house by Arthur, has been superseded by Edward L. Hadlen, a New York editor. Robertson was a loud mouthed blusterer, and particularly so in his last year prior to the national convention, and Arthur would have made a host of friends if he had kicked him at least three leagues out into the bay at the time. He was never worthy of that or any other office. A couple of millions of good republicans will be glad to know that the country is done with him for a while at least.—Madison Democrat.

The retention of Collector Robertson by President Arthur showed that the latter had too much good sense to take advantage of the former being an offensive factionist, and therefore the president allowed him to remain. Had Mr. Arthur been as much a partisan as Cleveland or some other of the presidents, Robertson would have to "walk the plank" at a lively pace. But Mr. Arthur was above removing an official because he did not support his administration. Had he adopted the democratic method he would have kicked out every offensive factionist and used the power of the government to secure his nomination. But he was too noble a gentleman for that, and therefore Robertson, with all his offensiveness, was allowed to incur the odium of collector of the port of New York.

There is a good deal of feeling among a certain class of democrats at Portage, over the suspension of Captain C. O. Dow, postmaster at that city. The State Register publishes a petition which the democrats of Portage have sent to the president and postmaster general, its full text being as follows:

To the Honorable Wm. F. Vilas, Postmaster General U. S. A., Washington, D. C.: Sir—We, the undersigned citizens of Portage, Colfax county, Wis., who contributed with our votes and influence to the support of Grover Cleveland in the late presidential election, recognizing the fact that Capt. C. O. Dow has discharged the duties of postmaster in this city faithfully, acceptably and in an impartial manner, and having an abiding faith in the sincerity of the administration in its pledges of civil service reform, do hereby respectfully and earnestly request that the said C. O. Dow be continued in the said office till the expiration of the term for which he was appointed. We believe such a course, affecting the fortune of one of the surviving heroes of Gettysburg, would be in full and perfect accord with the expressed policy of the administration and in complete harmony with the unbiased sympathies of the people of Portage.

The petition was signed by twenty-five staunch democrats who voted for Cleveland last fall. Of course, the petition will do no good. The decree has gone forth that Dow must be expended on the false charge that he is an offensive partisan, and there is no hope that the judgment of the administration will be set aside.

The men who are howling for the unlimited coinage of silver wanted a scalp, and they have not got it. The superintendent of the United States mint. He was asked to resign, but he refused, and after waiting several days the president brought into use the official guillotine, and Burchard's head went into the basket. It was a question whether Mr. Burchard could be removed without cause, except that his place was wanted for a democratic aspirant. But the administration took the responsibility of suspending him, and in the face of this fact the senate will probably take time to enquire into the reasons that caused his suspension. This removal was made to please the silver men who were indignant with Burchard because, though he voted for the remonetization of silver when he was in congress, he has for some years officially recommended the discontinuance of the coinage of silver, because the vaults were overladen with a coin that could not be put in circulation as fast as it could be coined. The president, in his silver letter last winter, agreed with Burchard on the silver question, but the silver men made a raid on the administration, peremptorily demanded Burchard's scalp, and to please the men with him he was not in harmony on the coinage of silver, the president gave them the scalp on the matter of humiliation.

Mr. Burchard's successor is James B. Kimball, president of the Everet mining company of Pennsylvania, and is also professor of economic science in Lehigh university. He is an able man, but he is tainted with the silver craze, and for that reason his appointment was made.

It is reported on Wall street that money is actually a drug in the market. Last week the First National bank of New York city, one of the largest and most active institutions, sent out a circular to its correspondents announcing that, after July 1, "and until we can obtain better rates for money, we find ourselves obliged to fix rates of interest on the balances of our correspondents, of $5.00 and upwards, at 1 1/2 per cent per annum." There never was a time in the history of the country when there was as much idle money as now, and the cause is not difficult to explain. A great deal has been drawn from manufacturing and other interests because of the stagnation of trade. For some time the country has produced in manufacturing articles and in coal, more than it could consume, so that at the present time there is a heavy surplus. There is not an article from a paper of pins to a steam engine that is not a drug on the market for the simple reason that there is an over-production. It is difficult to predict rationally when there shall be a change for the better, especially in the east. There are some promising signs in the west as trade is more active, the profits on manufactured articles larger, and the "new" or "cheap" goods than in the crowded east. But there will not likely be a radical change all over the country until capitalists everywhere are satisfied that the coming congress will not again unsettle business by tinkering with the tariff. By the time this comes about, if it comes at all, the surplus stock will be worked off, a new crop will be on the market, business confidence will probably be restored, and all departments of trade stimulated. It will take time to bring about "good times," and it will require conservative action on the part of congress. If congress will keep its head level on the question of the tariff, there will be no trouble in working out of the present financial difficulty.

Some important facts have been telegraphed from Washington in regard to the amount paid out annually for pensions. An examination of the official figures showing the exact amount paid by the United States on account of pensions, shows that a very grave misapprehension exists in the popular mind as to the amount that is being paid out annually for this purpose. Prior to the passage of the arrangement set the annual pension roll was reduced to $27,000,000. Prior to the war of the rebellion the annual pension list was only about $1,000,000. For the year ending June 30, 1883, the aggregate disbursements increased to nearly $5,000,000, and the year following they were swollen to over $10,000,000. The volume of payments constantly increased from that time until June 30, 1877, when the highest point was reached, the amount paid that year being $24,344,000. From this point the aggregate steadily decreased until the passage of the arrangement set in 1879, when it increased from $27,000,000 to $36,000,000 in one year. For the fiscal year 1880 nearly $37,000,000 was disbursed for pensions, and for the fiscal year 1883 over $50,000,000 was paid. This is the highest point ever reached, although the belief is general that nearly $100,000,000 per annum is required to satisfy the pension list. This erroneous impression is quite natural and has been created by the fact that the pension office was unable to make even approximately correct estimates as to the sum of money that would be required.

From July 1, 1863, to June 30, 1884, a period of twenty-one years, the total payments on account of pensions was $697,418,585, which is equal to an annual average of $32,739,029. This may properly be regarded as the entailed cost of the rebellion started and carried on by the southern states. It is, perhaps, pertinent in this connection to observe that upon their return to political power these states find that the expenditure on account of pensions for Union soldiers is the only one that has not been materially reduced by the republicans. Since the passage of the arrangement set in 1879 the total disbursements for pensions was $24,744,992. These figures furnish the sum total of actual payments made from July 1, 1873, to June 30, 1884, a period of eleven years. Putting the payments for the year which will end with Tuesday next at $61,000,000, which would give an aggregate for the eight years of an average of $18,500,116 per annum. Thus it will be seen that, notwithstanding the frequent allegations that the arrangement set has cost the treasury $100,000,000 per annum, the actual cash disbursements have been less than $49,000,000. Unless there should be additional legislation on the subject, the average annual payments for pensions during the coming eight years will not exceed $40,000,000.

DESIGN IN CREATION

A MORE REASONABLE CONCEPTION THAN NO DESIGN.

Evolution a Witness to the Truth of the belief in an Omnipotent Designer—Special Providence in Harmony with Natural Law.

New York, June 23.—Ray Henry Ward Beecher's sermon Sunday morning was upon the questions of design in creation and of general and special providence, as they stand related, not only to scripture testimony, but to what we know of the course of nature in this world. The text was the famous German scientist, Haeckel, that the world needs no God, that it is in itself provision for all the phenomena that have taken place, seemed to Mr. Beecher not to simplify the problem of creation, but to make it still more difficult to comprehend. Nothing in human experience furnishes a basis for following in the origin and progress of the world of its own self, without external influence. The belief that back of every effect there must be a cause has been wrought into the very common sense of mankind. And Haeckel's theory leaves the origin of matter still unexplained, and the origin of life and the existence of organisms or laws in matter seem inconceivable. The same is true of the origin of the Divine Being, but Haeckel's theory is removed from human investigation, which can only take hold of that which has some relation to the organization of the mind and body, and God has not. But we gain nothing by excluding divine intelligence, and to include it amounts to the way of investigation, and the existence of the human mind is a mystery to conceive of a personal God, with intelligence, will and power, than to conceive of such vast and varied substances as Haeckel's philosophy is now beginning to explain. We cannot understand the divine nature, so exalted above anything yet developed in us, except it dwells upon us when we are ourselves unfolded and rise to such a higher organization as God is not. The doctrine of evolution at first seemed to destroy the fact of intelligent design in creation. So the agnostic school, which includes some of the noblest spirits of our day, sprang up. "God may exist, but we do not know it," they say. But this is what the Bible said from beginning to end. It is the philosophy of a man's mind to explain. We cannot understand the divine nature, so exalted above anything yet developed in us, except it dwells upon us when we are ourselves unfolded and rise to such a higher organization as God is not.

We cannot understand the divine nature, so exalted above anything yet developed in us, except it dwells upon us when we are ourselves unfolded and rise to such a higher organization as God is not.

As to special providence, no doctrine was more explicitly taught by Jesus Christ than that of God's personal care and inspection of individuals and communities. If science should overthrow this doctrine it would make a serious breach in our faith, not only in the New Testament, but in the divinity of Christ himself. Men say that God would not send natural law for the benefit of any favored person, family or community. They say God works through laws of force, and never otherwise. This is impudent. We don't know what God thinks, nor what He does. Some parts of His ways we know, but we are in the reach of our error, and not all; and while we have no right to affirm that He does not, we have no right to affirm that He does not. The popular idea that natural laws are unchangeable, irresistible, uncontrollable, is an illusion. Nothing is gentler, more pliable and susceptible than natural laws. Obey them and they become your servants. Natural laws are constantly checked, divided, made independent of each other, and in conflict one against the other and made to compromise. We make wind and water grind for us and carry us. Electricity—the great buffoon of the world in winter nights, or flashing about in storms, the prodigies of the world—in its uncontrolled state was useless and barren. Now it doctors the sick, lights our dwellings, plays postboy, carries news in a twinkling round the world, it has become a grateful because the will of man learned how to use it. Men can, by using—not abusing or violating—natural laws make of them a providence for the advancement or elevation, not only of themselves, but of those around them.

The invention of a single machine may change the industries and destinies of nations. Civilization is but a vast subjection of natural laws by human intelligence and will. And if God cannot create a providence by using—not violating—natural laws, then he cannot do what the wisest creatures on earth can do in some degree. He can exert directly or indirectly upon the consciousness of men that which will make them the ancestors of His own decree. Some hold that God takes care of the system only, and does not head incidental results. But I hold that there is another teaching in the Bible, namely, that all things shall be worked together for good to them that love God. In the last two hundred years the world has been thrown up to a certain point are doubtless surrounded by other and sterner laws, which have relation not so much to flesh and blood as to the mind and spirit of man. And when men love God and live in the attitude of the divine nature, they are taken upon these by invisible influences that are more really natural laws than any of the lower and grosser ones that pertain to the body and to external conditions. I find nothing in science that sets this doctrine aside, but I find much there that corroborates it.

Too Old to Commit Suicide. Chicago, June 23.—Sunday afternoon Mrs. O'Shaughnessy, aged 85, threw herself in front of an outgoing Baltimore & Ohio passenger train at Thirty-ninth street. She was frightfully mangled, and the remains were conveyed to the home of her daughter, Mrs. Peter Egan, 4038 State street. The old lady had been living there for several years, and her daughter says she was slightly deranged.

LONDON, June 23.—The Standard, in its financial article, says it is gradually being formed as to the state of stocks of both wheat and flour throughout the kingdom, and that it will be as discouraging during the coming year as well as to the distressed American holders, since they promise to be much larger than was the case three months ago. There are also 500,000 quarters more of wheat on passage to Great Britain than last year.

An Anglo-French War Predicted. LONDON, June 23.—In a conference with Lord Salisbury Saturday, Mr. Waddington, the French ambassador at London, insisted on the demand that an early date be fixed for the withdrawal of the British troops from Egypt. Mr. De Lesseps, in a conversation with Lord Salisbury, said he was convinced that unless England withdrew from Egypt the Egyptian dispute would end in an Anglo-French war.

SWING SONG.

(William Alton in Magazine of Art.)

Swing, swing, swing, sing!
Here's my theme and I am a King!
Swing, sing, swing, sing!
Farwell, Earth, for I'm on the wing!

Low, high, here I fly,
Like a bird through sunny sky!
Free, free, over the sea,
Over the mountain, over the sea!

Up, down, up and down,
Which is way to London town?
Where, where, up in the air,
Close your eyes and now you are there!

Soon, soon, afternoons,
Over the sun, over the moon,
Far, far, over all the world,
Sweeping on from star to star!

No, no, low, low,
Drooping down with my toes,
Low, low, to and fro,
Slow-slow-slow-slow.

WHEN YOUR GIRTH INCREASES.

Extra Weight To Be Carried Through All the Labors of Life.

(Sir Henry Thompson in Nineteenth Century.)

There is that occasional visit to the tailor, where, tape in hand, the anxious customer is made to listen to the various measurements of his girth, and congratulated on the gradual increase thereof. He never in his life saw you looking so well, and your girth is a good deal below "since last year!" indignantly intimating that as an older man or so you will have nearly as fine a chest as Heenan! And you, poor deluded victim, are more than half-willing to be deceived by the increasing size of an equivalent to increasing health and strength, especially as your wife emphatically takes that view, and regards your augmenting portliness with approval.

P. W. I. Blood, P. & E.

A Mixture That Contaminates the Blood.

When the bile is diverted from its proper channels, into the blood, which is the way the case in liver complaints, it becomes a poison. Its abnormal presence in the circulation and stomach is indicated by the eruption of the skin with a hideous saffron tinge, by head aches, vertigo, nausea, pain in the right side and under the right shoulder blade, by indigestion, obstruction of the bowels, and other minor symptoms. Order may be substituted for this state of chaos, and further health and vitality may be secured by the use of P. W. I. Blood, P. & E. Bitters, which, by relaxing the bowels, promotes the escape from the circulation of bilious impurities, besides regularizing the action of the liver. This pleasant and purely vegetable antibilious medicine is not only infinitely more effective than any form of mercury, but it is an account of its free, regular, and powerful action, it is the only remedy for this poisonous drug.

RIOTOUS CHRISTIANS.

A CHURCH QUARREL CULMINATES IN A BLOODY RIOT.

Toledo Police Differ as to a Priest's Virtues—Sanguinary Fight Between Two Tinkers—Families—Banker Fish—Sent to the Penitentiary.

TOLEDO, Ohio, June 29.—About 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon a bloody riot took place at a Polish settlement, situated near Locust and Dorset streets, between two opposing factions of the St. Hedwig's Polish Catholic church, where about 100 men, women and children participated.

About a week ago an attempt was made to blow up the house of the Rev. Lowmowski, pastor of the church, and a member of the congregation by the name of Dalkowski was arrested for so doing and placed under bonds. A saloon-keeper named Pater Szalaszkiewicz went his bail, and he was subsequently released. But blood seems to have been upon the priest. Sunday afternoon on a crowd gathered in Szalaszkiewicz's saloon and denounced the saloon-keeper for going Dalkowski's bail. A little scuffling followed, and when the men were ripe for riot they attacked Dalkowski's house which was near the saloon. The excitement increased, and in a few moments the crowd, thoroughly maddened, commenced to besiege the house with all kinds of missiles, such as stones, etc. The house was totally demolished, furniture destroyed, and the inmates badly bruised. Dalkowski was horribly beaten with clubs, the back of his head being crushed to a pulp.

The crowd, which had been increasing in numbers, then attacked Szalaszkiewicz's saloon, completely wrecking it. A Poleander, a looker-on by the name of Martin Dobrowolski, was shot through the forehead and mortally killed. A number of the deceased man's friends were also badly used, two men sustaining serious injuries. Mrs. Dalkowski and another woman were likewise assaulted, but they were not considered dangerous. Thirteen arrests were made, but the ones who did the killing are not known. The trouble arose over a difference of opinion as to the priest, some of his flock desiring his removal, while others championed him.

THE MARTINS AND TOLIVERS.

A Kentucky Vendetta Breaks Out—A Fresh—The Martins Wanted—Mr. Sweeney, Ky. June 29.—The war in Row county has broken out afresh. For nearly a year there have been constant attacks between two factions—the Tolivers and the Martins. Floyd Toliver was killed last August by John Martin. Martin was lynched by Toliver's friends, and there have been since frequent collisions and several others killed. Recently Governor Knott sent a commission to Morehead, the county seat, which it was supposed had adjusted the feud amicably. But on the election the other day Craig Toliver, brother of the first man killed, was elected. He was shot by a Martin. The leader of the Martins, Cook Humphreys, a sheriff, was shot and given head and neck wounds. He was shot on Friday and resigned the office. He then armed himself and threatened trouble to the sheriff who might be appointed. A warrant was sworn out and put in the hands of Marshal Toler. Toliver went to execute it Sunday. On arriving at the Martin homestead Toliver told Miss Sue Martin, who met him, that he wanted Humphreys. No answer being made he went upstairs and found Humphreys in a room. When he saw the door he was fired upon by Humphreys and dangerously wounded. The Tolivers faction, hearing the news, gathered and are besieging the house. The Martins are gathered and are ready to fight. Any previous feud has been forgotten. Troops will be called for.

MISCELLANEOUS.

PRETENSE AND EVENSON will refund the price paid if Acker's Blood Elixir does not restore any skin or blood disorder. A new, but thoroughly tested discovery now on hand.

English girls are suppressed. But they do not know it. If soon they are not heard, and they are not often seen. They are never put on exhibition. Their manners are quiet, and their dress is always very simple. They are dressed as a rule. Children never wear jewelry. It is not often that an unmarried lady wears jewelry at all, and if so, very modest pieces, such as a pin or a ring. Children these few hot summer and winter, but she she they are the most comfortable things that she ever had on her feet; that before she wore them she used to wear "common-sense" shoes, made with great attention to the anatomy of the foot, and she never had a minute's happiness in them. When she played Olivia she bought shoes pumps as a part of her costume, and they were so comfortable that she has never worn anything else since.

No one could deny that Miss Terry was not the most strikingly dressed person in any room; but I venture to say that she would be the most inexpensively dressed. She has her gown made of anything that strikes her fancy, whether she does it in a dress shop or an upholsterer's. The suit is the thing she looks for, without regard to the display of fashion.
